A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

6. Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Clark et al. (Pub. No. U.S 2002/0152215).

For claim 1, Clark et al. teaches "a data search system for searching data (See paragraph [0003], [0042]) wherein each of plural metadata includes at least a global unique identifier ([0022]), a data index and a description sentence of base data said unique identifier being an identifier for identifying a specific object (See paragraph [0022], [0024]), each of said metadata being associated with corresponding base data by said data index and being associated with said object by said global unique identifier" (See paragraph [0022], [0024] wherein the metadata is associated with the catalog which includes authors names, a summary and images. However, the metadata as shown in 0022 is associated with the content by the ISBN, UPC or DOI etc), the system comprising:

"a metadata store for storing metadata"(See paragraph [0008]);
"an input for entering said global unique identifier by capturing said global unique identifier from an object" (See paragraph [0042], [0022],[0086]);

"a metadata searcher for searching for a specific metadata by searching said read out set of metadata for a specific description sentence"(See paragraph [0008] wherein teachings include selecting specific metadata from the stored metadata that corresponds to electronic content authorized for the retailer).

For claim 2, Clark et al. teaches "wherein a plurality of said metadata includes the same global unique identifier"(See paragraph [0022])

For claim 3, Clark et al. teaches "means for capturing said data index from the specific metadata"(See paragraph [0022], [0024]), and means for capturing base data corresponding to said specific metadata based on said data index"(See paragraph [0022], [0024] wherein the metadata is associated with the catalog which includes authors names, a summary and images. However, the metadata as shown in 0022 is associated with the content by the ISBN, UPC or DOI etc).

For claim 4, Clark et al. teaches "means for capturing said data index from the specific metadata"(See paragraph [0022], [0024]), and means for capturing base data corresponding to said specific metadata based on said data index"(See paragraph [0022], [0024] wherein the metadata is associated with the catalog which includes authors names, a summary and images.
